

PLANET NOW! Conversations in Environmental Studies

ARE RIVERS PEOPLE TOO?

Kelsey Hample

Samantha Majhor

Erika R. George

Tuesday, February 8th ♦ 5:30PM CST via Zoom

All members of the Rice community and public are welcome to join us online for this conversation. Register for your zoom link at enst.rice.edu/planet-now.

Speakers:

Kelsey Hample is assistant professor of economics at Furman University who focuses on sustainable policies for those living in rural parts of developing countries. Samantha Majhor, assistant professor of English at Marquette University who researches contemporary Native American literature. Erika R. George, the Samuel D. Thurman Professor of Law at the University of Utah and director of the Tanner Humanities Center and researches the responsibilities of multinational corporations to respect international human rights.

Moderator:

Joseph Campana, the William Shakespeare Professor of English and director of Rice's Center for Environmental Studies will moderate.

RICE UNIVERSITY

Center for Environmental Studies

School of Architecture · School of Humanities

This event is made possible through the joint effort of the Furman Humanities Center, the Center for the Advancement of the Humanities at Marquette University, the Center for Environmental Studies at Rice University, and the Tanner Humanities Center at the University of Utah.