

READING GROUPS

Each semester, various groups of professors and students meet for voluntary reading groups of several foreign languages (Greek, Latin, Arabic, German, French). These groups are ad hoc and informal. Professors who facilitate these groups usually send out emails at the beginning of the semester announcing them and asking for possible times. You may also approach professors who have certain other language skills to ask if they would lead a group in that language. Or if you yourself have a competency in a language that others can benefit from, please consider leading one yourself!
