INTRODUCTION

This alphabetized list of surnames includes all spelling variations, the tribes/ethnicities noted, the states where the schools were located, and box numbers of the original records. Each entry provides a distinct surname variation with one associated tribe/ethnicity, state, and box number, which is repeated as needed for surname combinations with multiple spelling variations, ethnic associations and/or box numbers.

These special attendance records were created to document those students whose tuition funding came from their group/tribe's federal trust fund accounts. Since some groups lacked such accounts, schools serving these students did not create these records. Consequently, the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions Records includes no quarterly attendance records for Catholic schools with native students in Alaska, Maine, Mississippi, New York, and Pennsylvania.

States/ Boxes

The records are arranged by state (identified by zipcode abbreviations) within 38 boxes from 15 states and thereunder by locality and school. Box 39 includes subsequent additions for nine schools in six states, 1976-1977, which are also arranged by state and thereunder by locality and school. Noted here are the total number of surname entries per state.

Background

Most Native Americans had surnames by 1900, and most acquired them locally, either from their family and tribal heritage or from local non-Indians. Oftentimes, spellings, capitalization, spacing between words, and the use of hyphens for the same surname varied over time. Some surnames were written first in Native languages and then later in English (or French or Spanish). At St. Labre's Mission in Montana, Native language surnames were used exclusively through 1904, followed by the exclusive use of English translations beginning the following year.

General Surname Characteristics

- Non-Native origin: Reflects historic non-Indian influence and may indicate some Non-Native ancestry.
- Native origin not always recognizable: When expressed in Native American languages, many surnames, e.g. Cantu, Hustoni, and Sooktis, are not recognizable as ones of Native origin among those unfamiliar with the languages. When translated into English and shortened to single words, others became indistinguishable from names of non-Native origin also expressed in English, e.g. Fish, White, Wolf.
