ANTHROPOLOGY (Updated 2/11/11)
At the completion of the Anthropology major, the graduate is able to:

1. Analyze how historical, social, environmental and biological forces shape cultures.

2. Use the definitions, methods, and theory(ies) of biological anthropology to define what it means to be human.

3. Articulate the role that archaeology plays in reconstructing past cultural systems.

4. Engage anthropology’s methods and theories with contemporary social issues.
