EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP  M.Ed.  (Principal and Director of Instruction licenses)  (August 2006)
At the completion of the Educational Leadership M.Ed. degree program, the graduate is able to:

1. Analyze educational issues using theoretical and research perspectives from the social sciences (history, psychology, sociology, education).

2. Apply psychological, historical, and educational research literature to improve educational service in a school or organization.

3. Advocate for and implement school programs that support the learning and well-being of a diverse student population.

4. Evaluate own leadership using a variety of educational frameworks and data sources.

5. Demonstrate communication and collaboration skills that support educational leadership.