LES ASPIN CENTER (August 2006)
After completion of a term at the Les Aspin Center, the student is able to:

1. Integrate theoretical concepts of political science, theology, and philosophy with first hand observations.

2. Apply leadership skills in group work projects, presentations, and class discussions.

3. Articulate the impact of competing public policy positions on legislation.

4. Evaluate the success or failure of public policies in the context of persistent social problems such as homelessness, addiction, and unemployment.