“In this day and age, the need for non-traditional adult learning and formation is greater than ever before. As someone who has personally benefited from a nontraditional program in order to complete my undergraduate degree, I am mindful of the particular needs of this unique niche of student. Teaching in the College of Professional Studies enables me to give back to the educational community a small part of which I have received.”

Research Interests

- The Development of the Canon of Scripture
- The Development of Eucharistic Theology and Liturgies
- The Philosophical and Theological Ramifications of Fantasy Literature, especially in the writings of CS Lewis and JRR Tolkien; the Concept of Story
