LATIN AMERICAN POLITICS

This course deals with contemporary political life in Latin America. It covers Mexico, Cuba, and the six major countries of South America, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Peru, and Venezuela. Readings, lectures, and class discussions will focus on cultural values and influences, economic institutions and forces, the military, the influence of external forces, and recent efforts to strengthen and deepen democratic institutions and practices. In each of the countries we study, we will look at their recent (1970s and early-1980s) experiences with authoritarian rule, the "transitions" to civilian rule and "democracy" that have followed upon them, and the problems that Latin American countries have encountered in deepening and consolidating their newly restored democracies.

The course will require active student participation. Each student will be asked to make a brief, ten-minute presentation to the class on current developments in one of the eight countries we will be studying. Students are also expected to do the assigned readings and to come to class prepared to discuss them critically. Those who might be uncomfortable responding when called upon in class might consider writing (typing) out their questions and comments in advance, and be ready to clarify or elaborate upon them in class. In either event, class participation will make up 20% of a student’s semester grade. In addition, there will be three (3) 1,500-word, take-home essay exams, each worth 15%, and a semester take-home, essay exam, worth 35%, of the semester grade.

The following books should be purchased and read by all:
