

Catholic Groups associated with African Americans

Members of the following Catholic groups are depicted in the Black Catholics of the United States digital image collection presented by the Special Collections and University Archives Department of Marquette University. This list presents them by the subject terms used by the Library of Congress (current October 2014). Any alternative names (e.g. legal, common, popular) follow in brackets, and if members use initials to identify themselves, they follow in parentheses. Italics denote the Marquette archival collections from which the images originated.

Dioceses and Archdioceses

All local Catholic institutions, e.g. missions, parishes, schools, depicted in the images are served by the Latin Rite archdioceses and dioceses listed below. Using their contemporary names, they are arranged alphabetically by state and there under by lineage (i.e. predecessor and successor dioceses) beginning in 1900. This enables researchers to find more information when the diocese serving them has changed over time.

The three archival collections at Marquette University from where the images were obtained may contain more related information. They are the records of the Black and Indian Mission Collection and the Catholic Negro-American Mission Board within the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions Records, and the National Black Sisters Conference Records.
