Course Title: Christian Faith in Cultural Contexts

Description:

Although formerly predominant in the global north, Christian faith has become a world religion. While previously about 80% of Christians are located in Europe and North America, today the face of Christianity has changed with about 60% of practicing Christians found in the global south of Asia, Latin America, Africa, the Caribbean, etc. and other countries of the Third World. This course acknowledges the significance of this shift, the new landscape of Christian faith as a world religion. Special attention is given to the inculturation of Christian faith and through an acknowledgement of the historical consciousness draws the implication of Christian faith in various cultural contexts. Through a study of the history of Christianity in the various continents, Christianity is presented as a world religion topographically, theologically, geographically, socio-politically, and structurally.
