The Marquette Lonergan Project hopes, through annual colloquia, to address the principal systematic-theological issues of our time in the context of contemporary religious diversity. This year’s colloquium is the initial meeting of an international group of theologians collaborating to write a full-scale systematic theology based on the work of Rev. Bernard Lonergan, S.J., and the developments on Lonergan’s work offered by Rev. Robert M. Doran, S.J., Ph.D., Emmett Doerr Chair in Catholic Systematic Theology at Marquette University.

The two organizers of the international project, Dr. Neil Ormerod of Australian Catholic University and Rev. Darren Dias, O.P., Ph.D., of the University of St. Michael’s College at the University of Toronto, will headline this year’s colloquium. They will be joined by Father Doran; Dr. John Dadosky of Regis College at the University of Toronto; Dr. Joseph Mudd of Gonzaga University; Dr. Randall Rosenberg of Saint Louis University; Dr. Jeremy Blackwood of Marquette University; Dr. Joseph Ogbonnaya of Marquette University; Rev. Thomas Hughson, S.J., Ph.D., of Marquette University; and Marquette Theology Department graduate students, including Juliana Vazquez, Joe Gordon, Jonathan Heaps, Brian Bajzek and Ryan Hemmer. Others are welcome to participate in this discussion.

For more information, please contact Rev. Robert Doran, S.J., Ph.D., at 414.288.3164 or robert.doran@marquette.edu.

4 p.m. Thursday, November 7
Rev. Robert M. Doran, S.J., Ph.D., Marquette University,
“The Structure of Systematic Theology”

10 a.m. Friday, November 8
Rev. Darren Dias, O.P., Ph.D., of the University of St. Michael’s College at Toronto University will conduct a roundtable discussion with Dadosky, Mudd, Rosenberg, Blackwood, Ogbonnaya and Hughson and graduate students.

2 p.m. Friday, November 8
Dr. Neil Ormerod of Australian Catholic University will join the group by Skype for an interview about the systematic theology project and the Australian participation in it.