Rev. Dorian Llywelyn, S.J.
Associate Professor of Theological Studies
Director of Catholic Studies
Loyola Marymount University

Father Llywelyn is the Rev. Francis Wade, S.J., Chair for fall 2014 in the Department of Theology.

4:00 p.m.
Alumni Memorial Union, Lunda Room
1442 West Wisconsin Avenue

The lecture is free and open to the public, but seating is limited.
For questions or special needs, please contact Kim Newman at kimberly.newman@marquette.edu or 414.288.7511.

Parking is available in the 16th Street Parking Structure located between West Wisconsin Avenue and West Wells Street.

Father Llywelyn’s academic expertise is Christian spirituality, focusing especially on the relationship between faith and culture. His first book, Sacred Place, Chosen People: Land and National Identity in Welsh Spirituality, investigates the nexus between religious and cultural identities in his native Wales. His second book, Toward a Catholic Theology of Nationality, examines the contested field of nationalism and national identity through the lens of systematic theology. He is currently researching a book on devotion to the Virgin Mary and imperialism. He has published articles in the areas of Eastern Christian iconography, Mariology, Welsh hymnology, theology and culture, and popular religiosity.

Father Llywelyn earned his doctorate at the University of Wales and has taught there and Loyola Marymount University.
The Rev. Francis Wade, S.J., Public Lecture

Our Father Jesus the Nazarene at the End of the World: Lessons from Popular Devotion

Thursday, November 6, 2014