Greetings

FROM THE CHAIR

It is our pleasure to share with you the 2015 edition of Accounting, the magazine of the Department of Accounting of the College of Business Administration at Marquette University. Our hope is that the articles about fellow accounting alumni and the information about the Accounting Department and College of Business Administration will help to keep you connected to Marquette.

The Accounting Department faculty members are proud to recognize the accomplishments of the alumni, current students and friends of the accounting program. An update on faculty and department activities is also provided.

I want to especially thank our Master of Science students for conducting the interviews and writing them up, Amanda Ames, our executive assistant, for her editorial work and Dora Hagen for designing the magazine. Everyone has done an excellent job.

Thank you for your continued support! Through your business and community activities, you reflect the values and ideals of Marquette University to all whom you meet and work with. Many of you have impacted the accounting program by referring prospective students, serving as mentors, or offering internships and full-time employment opportunities. I have been privileged to meet and work with many of you. When I meet with prospective students and their parents, I take pleasure in discussing the various ways that each of you as alums, as well as friends of the program, support the accounting department.

Please send along any items of personal and professional interest that you would like to share by using the back page of the magazine, by calling, or by e-mailing us. If you are ever on campus, please stop by, as we would welcome the opportunity to visit with you.

Ask Tim Knight if he, as a Marquette University accounting student, ever imagined he would end up where he is today and his answer is simple: “No way.” Today, Tim is the Chief Executive Officer of Wrapports LLC, a technology holding company headquartered in downtown Chicago, Illinois. Wrapports was created in late 2011 as an entity to acquire the Chicago Sun-Times and adjacent suburban publications. The company has created a venture fund to invest in technology businesses in the media sector. Ultimately, Wrapports is committed to helping the management of underperforming businesses transform themselves into successful 21st century local media companies. Tim believes his background in both the business and broad liberal arts courses that he took at Marquette have helped him navigate the uncertain world of local media.

Tim grew up near Flint, Michigan, and is the oldest of six children. His parents instilled in him and all of his siblings a core value of the importance of family, something Tim continues to find deeply meaningful. As the oldest, Tim was often responsible for watching over his siblings. As to his extended family, Tim considers himself very lucky to have had his grandparents, aunts, uncles, and cousins located close to Flint. As a result, Sunday dinners with all the family members were a regular occurrence and remain wonderful memories.

Ultimately, it was a tragic event that brought his family even closer. When Tim was a sophomore in high school, his youngest brother, Michael, was involved in a drowning accident. Michael, age four, remained in a coma until his passing three years later. The sad event served to strengthen the bonds between Tim’s family members even more and has made Tim particularly empathetic toward others. Today, Tim tries to stay in regular contact with all siblings, Mark, Ted, Maureen, and Bridget, and their families, even though they are scattered across the United States.

Tim followed in his father’s footsteps in attending Marquette as his father graduated from Marquette’s Dental School in 1962. Tim remembers his father telling stories about all his positive experiences at the university and he recalls, in particular, his father speaking very highly of the Jesuits and the values the school still stands for – excellence, faith, leadership, and service. Tim knew Marquette would be a place where he would be challenged in the classroom, a place where he could grow in his faith, and a place from which he could give back to the community. Tim knew he wanted to attend a Catholic university and was drawn to Marquette because he also wanted to experience a truly urban setting. While attending school in Flint, Tim described his life as “pretty suburban.” He was looking forward to having different opportunities and experiences in college.

Growing up, Tim worked at his father’s dental office and believed he might follow in his father’s footsteps, so accounting was not originally a part of his plan. However, at his father’s office, Tim helped with bookkeeping and, over time, found he enjoyed accounting more and more. So, during his sophomore year, Tim transferred into the College of Business Administration. He was attracted to accounting because of the discipline and structure required to complete his assignments. One of Tim’s favorite things about Marquette’s business school was the requirement to complete a full complement of liberal arts courses. Tim credits the political science, theology, and philosophy courses he took as providing him with the opportunity to develop his critical thinking skills.

No matter what field one is in, Tim believes that integrity and humility will lead one to success.
thinking skills. When asked more specifically about his time at Marquette, Tim remembers three professors who made a strong impression on him – Dr. Jim Trebby in accounting, Mr. Bill Sturm in business law, and Dr. David Mielke in financial statement analysis courses. He remembers all three professors as people he looked up to and who were more than willing to help him in any way possible.

Looking back, Tim remembers gaining the networking skills needed to be successful in the business world outside the classroom. Tim and his friends enjoyed going to several local watering holes and it was there that Tim realized the importance of establishing and maintaining relationships with his classmates. Ultimately, these collegiate social experiences helped Tim develop the basic skills necessary for creating and fostering relationships in the business world.

Even though Tim was drawn to accounting, he was not sure he wanted to do only accounting for his entire career. Thus, during his senior year at Marquette, he decided to go to law school. After getting his undergraduate accounting degree from Marquette and successfully completing the CPA exam, Tim went on to earn his Juris Doctorate degree with honors from DePaul University College of Law in Chicago. During his second year of law school, Tim accepted a summer associate position with the Chicago office of Skadden Arps, a large New York-based law firm. After graduation from DePaul, Tim began working full-time with Skadden Arps. After four years of the intensity of life in the Chicago office, Tim was given the opportunity to transfer to the firm’s London office. He spent two years in London working on transactions that took him to Vienna, Budapest, and Prague. Tim notes that his favorite memory abroad was attending Easter Mass at the Vatican in Rome and seeing Pope John Paul II. After two years abroad, Tim returned to Chicago to join the Chicago Tribune in the mergers and acquisitions unit.

In 2008, the Tribune Company sold Newsday to a New York cable company. In 2010, Tim and his family returned to the Chicago area and in late 2011, Tim became CEO of Wrapports, LLC.

In addition to working at Wrapports, LLC, Tim enjoys the opportunity to give back to the community. Tim is a member of the Dean’s Council of Excellence for the College of Business Administration at Marquette and on the Board of Trustees at DePaul University. Additionally, Tim is on the boards of Mercy Home for Boys and Girls, Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and the Illinois Mentoring Partnership.

Tim treasures the meaningful time he shares with his family. Tim and his wife, Stephanie, have been married for 10 years. They met through friends in Chicago and have been blessed with two sons, a fourth grader named Quinn and a first grader named Fitz. As a result of having young and active boys, the family spends most of their free time at one or another of the boys’ activities.

Living in nearby Chicago, Tim enjoys being able to bring his family to Milwaukee a half-dozen times a year. Tim loves visiting Milwaukee, whether to explore his old stomping grounds or to attend a Marquette basketball game (he has been spotted at quite a few). His favorite player is Jimmy Butler, whom he still closely follows on the Chicago Bulls team.

Tim has taken a career path he could not have anticipated – from accounting, to law, to the media – and he says he would not change a thing. No matter what field one is in, Tim believes that integrity and humility will lead one to success. In addition, the lessons Tim learned throughout his childhood and the Jesuit values he learned while at Marquette still have a profound impact on his life today. From his parents, Tim learned the importance of family and hard work. At Marquette, he learned the importance of acting with the highest level of integrity in all circumstances and the importance of giving back to the community. Tim is truly an outstanding Marquette University alumnus.

Deciding where to go to college was an easy choice for Mark Santacrose, a Shorewood, Wisconsin, native, because he came from a family of Marquette University graduates. They include his parents, Mary Healy Conrad and Anthony, and two sisters. Mark’s mother and father met while both were attending Marquette after Anthony’s military service in the Korean War. When Anthony passed away, the funeral service was held at the Church of the Gesu. The Marquette tradition continues with the family Mark married into. His wife, Meg (née Fiorenza), her mother, father, and sister are all Marquette alumni. In fact, his father-in-law, John Fiorenza, was the university’s 1995 Alumnus of the Year. As for the next generation, Mark’s nephew, Matt Nicholson, currently attends the university as a freshman.

Mark graduated from Marquette in 1981 and attributes his current career success to the experiences and great education he received through Marquette’s accounting program. While Mark had always aspired to be a lawyer, he also always enjoyed the business side of things, and so he began his undergraduate studies as an accounting major. He grew to appreciate the value of accounting, the language of business, with the help of Drs. Don Giacomino and Frank Probst. After completing his undergraduate degree, Mark attended law school at Loyola University of Chicago. In law school, he focused on mergers and acquisitions, which allowed him to become knowledgeable about the legal process and due diligence. After graduating, he practiced law for seven years before returning to school in 1993 to earn his master’s degree from Northwestern University’s Kellogg School of Management.

Mark had a good share of interesting experiences and jobs on Marquette’s campus. The lessons learned from these jobs helped him understand how to become a better professional and taught him important lessons that he continues to use throughout his career. During one of his summers as an undergraduate, Mark cleaned dorm rooms. This is where he learned the value of staying in school to receive an education by discovering exactly what he did not want to do after that summer. As a desk receptionist at the all-female dormitory O’Donnell Hall, he learned the value of networking by consistently meeting and conversing with new people. While working as a lunch manager at the Mug Rack (formerly located in the Alumni Memorial Union), he was exposed to his first managerial experience. He learned the value of customer service as well as how to make a martini while bartending at university-sponsored functions on campus. Mark also has great memories of the Avalanche. The ‘Lanche, as most people called it, was a campus bar located at the intersection of 15th and Wells streets that, after more than 60 years of doing business, closed in 1997.

A great education, wonderful experiences, and lasting friendships are not the only things Mark is grateful to Marquette for. The most valuable gift of all was the opportunity to meet his future wife, Meg, who graduated from Marquette the same year Mark did with a degree in law enforcement. Fittingly, their marriage ceremony took place at the Church of the Gesu. Mark and Meg have four children: Anthony, Ryan, Erin, and Nina. One of their sons is a senior at Boston College while the other just recently graduated and is now currently working for Ernst & Young. Both daughters are still in high school.

Marquette provided much more than a four-year education, according to Mark, who believes Marquette is unique in focusing on developing the whole individual and not just on the skills transferable to the professional workplace. Through the values that Marquette taught him, Mark has learned how to treat others well, build teams upon a foundation of trust, and establish organizations with strong cultures of respect and integrity.
Cheryl Truesdale is Senior Director of Global Internal Audit at SC Johnson, a privately held, family-owned company based in Racine, Wisconsin. She has worked with the company for 19 years. The Truesdale family, Cheryl, her husband Eric and their three boys, Jacob (17), Grant (14) and Luke (12) live in Elkhorn, Wisconsin.

Both Cheryl and Eric graduated from Marquette in 1990 and 1992, respectively. Cheryl spoke about her many great memories of the university community, living off-campus in a large house at 14th and Kilbourn, and the professors and camaraderie within the business school. “I originally started out thinking I would be a Computer Programmer, but it wasn’t something I was particularly good at, so I started to take some business classes and it felt like that was a much better fit for me.” She enjoyed the accounting courses and that led her to major in accounting. In her senior year, Dr. Bob Yahr encouraged her to take the CPA exam during her last semester and she was able to get three out of the four parts completed prior to starting to work. She really appreciated that advice!

I was very impressed that Cheryl was also a college athlete. At the time, she had a pretty full calendar, with classes starting at 8:00 or 9:00 a.m., training in the afternoon and studying most weeknights. Time management skills and being well organized were essential. Cheryl fondly remembers her time running cross country and track, and travelling to various colleges with the team in the “blue vans,” typically leaving on a Friday and returning back to campus on Saturday night. “Being part of a team, doing your best every day, and following through on your commitments are life lessons that extend beyond sports and schooling,” she says and represent the values she wants her children to embrace.

After graduation, Cheryl spent six years in public accounting with Arthur Andersen in the Milwaukee office, passed the remaining part of the CPA exam, and then joined SC Johnson, one of her former clients. When I asked her what she likes about working at SC Johnson, without hesitation she replied, “SC Johnson’s culture and values are very consistent with mine. It is a results oriented company that focuses on doing what is right for the company, the employees, and the people who use our products.” Cheryl has had multiple roles over her career at SC Johnson. They include positions that provided financial support to the U.S. business, that involved corporate business planning, and that entailed analysis roles. Additionally, there was an overseas assignment and, currently, Cheryl serves as leader of the Global Internal Audit team. This breadth of experience continues to help Cheryl advance her career. In her current role, she is responsible for developing the global audit plan and assessing if there are adequate controls and processes in place to protect the company’s assets. Her days include many meetings, teleconferences, and working sessions to ensure the team’s objectives are accomplished.

In 2007, Cheryl had the opportunity to take a position with SC Johnson as a foreign service employee in Sydney, Australia. “It was a decision that my husband and I made together,” Cheryl said. “My husband was willing to put his career on hold to give our family this experience and to allow me to focus on my career.” Eric was a public relations executive at a firm in Milwaukee when they decided to move overseas. Because of their time in Australia, the Truesdale children developed a strong sense of adventure and continue to seek out and to explore new experiences. Their family also made lasting friendships with families who lived in Australia. Cheryl said, “We absolutely loved our time in Australia!” And there is one thing that attracted her most – the climate. “As a runner, you can be outside all year long and not have to deal with winter and snow!”

“Being part of a team, doing your best every day, and following through on your commitments are life lessons that extend beyond sports and schooling.”

Cheryl continues to get in a run about four times a week, at the start of the day, which typically begins for her at 5:00 a.m. She ran the Boston Marathon in 2013 and 2014 but has scaled back to running a few half marathons each year. Cheryl enjoys spending her free time with family and friends and watching her children play sports, which include wrestling, soccer, cross country running, and swimming. The family likes to travel and to be active when they vacation. Last year they traveled to Thailand where they met up with friends from Australia and their stay included a four-day bike trip (130 miles) through Northern Thailand. The Truesdales also enjoy doing sports together, such as downhill and cross country skiing, snowboarding, and the occasional “mud run,” such as the “Warrior Dash.”

After over 31 years, and 7,500 students, teaching business law and, on occasion, tax, at Marquette University, Associate Professor Greg Naples retired from the faculty last year, 2014, on December 31st.

While this is all Dr. Naples wanted me to include in this article on him, I could not do that for my favorite professor at Marquette. Professor Naples obtained his bachelor’s from the University of Notre Dame, his J.D. from the University of Illinois College of Law, and his LL.M. from DePaul University College of Law. Dr. Naples was also awarded a Certificate of Attendance from The Hague Academy of International Law.

He has taught or developed courses for the undergraduate, graduate, and executive MBA programs at Marquette and has spent some time teaching tax at the Law School. Prior to coming to Marquette, Prof. Naples was variously engaged in a private law practice and teaching at Northern Illinois University, William Rainey Harper College, Mundelein College, and Governors State University, all in Illinois, as well as being a distinguished visiting professor in the Graduate Program at the University of Florida. In his younger years, Dr. Naples also worked in Chicago for Touche Ross & Company and for Bishop & Crawford, Ltd.

Prof. Naples has been married to his high school love, Lynn, for over 45 years and they have three grown children (two Marquette grads and one Creighton grad) (two lawyers and a doctor), and seven grandchildren.

One of the more interesting things about Dr. Naples is the number of positions he has held relating to the NCAA. These include President and Vice President of the NCAA Faculty Athletics Association (a professional group comprised of over 1,100 colleges and universities), a member of various NCAA committees, Marquette’s Faculty Athletics Representative to the NCAA, and a member and Chair of Marquette’s Athletics Board.

Another interesting fact about Dr. Naples is his hobby of building things, especially houses. He could often be found carrying around a woodworking or construction magazine or something similar.

While this list of Dr. Naples’s accomplishments is impressive, the effect he had on his students is even more so. It is not that often that a professor is both feared for the difficulty of his or her exams and deep knowledge of the topic but is also funny, entertaining, and well-liked by students. I remember that when it came time for my friends and me to register for the first business law class, even though we had been told how challenging Dr. Naples’ class was, we still chose it. Then when we had to take the second business law class, we were actually excited to have Dr. Naples again and sad that he only taught two classes. Not only did he know that blue business law book cover to cover but he also managed to make the class enjoyable as well.

I have heard many students say that Dr. Naples was their favorite professor either in the Accounting Department or overall at Marquette, and this includes me. So it is not surprising that when I asked for his students’ help in remembering him as a great professor, that they were very willing to respond. Here are a few of their comments:

“He would try to be like ‘in the know’ with pop culture, etc., in the examples he used in class so that the students were engaged and found it mildly humorous – I mean Naples using Lady Gaga as an example is obviously just funny. Just little things like that to make what could be a dull topic more exciting.”

“The first class with him was pretty intimidating, but after taking two business law classes with him, I found that he is definitely my favorite professor I have had at Marquette. As an accounting student, I heard stories of how difficult business law could be, but I thought Dr. Naples actually made the class fun.”

“Once I emailed him to let him know that Peach Melba – his favorite flavor at Kopp’s Custard – was in the forecast for that week. He replied thankfully and signed his email “The Calorie Man.” Little things like that make me wish there was another business law course required for accounting majors just so I could take another class taught by Dr. Naples.”

The memory of Dr. Greg Naples’ unique and challenging approach to teaching business law will always remain with me and, it seems, many of my fellow students.

For his life after Marquette, Prof. Naples plans to finally finish constructing a home that he and Lynn have been building in Door County since 2001, to put more concerted time into a couple of small business ventures that he has begun, and to generally take time to do the usual grandchildren / travel / knee surgery routines.

Amanda Isken, a 2014 Marquette University accounting graduate student, has earned the Elijah Watt Sells Award (EWSA) for 2014. This annual award, one of the most prestigious professional awards in the accounting field, honors the top performers on the Uniform CPA Examination. In 2013, more than 94,000 candidates sat for the exam and only 55 met the award’s criteria of averaging 95.5 across all four test sections (a mere .0006 percent of test takers!).

Amanda was born and raised in Cedar Grove, Wisconsin, a small town about 45 minutes north of Milwaukee. She graduated from Marquette in 2013 with her bachelor of business administration degree and earned a master of science in accounting in 2014. After graduation, she started her career in August 2014 at PricewaterhouseCoopers as an assurance associate in Milwaukee. Amanda believes that there are no shortcuts to success. People have to work hard!

“I’ve had so many amazing teachers and was inspired by so many things throughout my time at Marquette, especially in the accounting program,” Amanda said. All of the accounting classes that Amanda took not only expanded her knowledge of what it takes to be a success in the field but also prepared her for the CPA exam. Perhaps the class that was most directly relevant to the exam was Dr. Mike Akers’ auditing course. The entire course was very similar to the material that she studied in the Becker FastPass exam review for the audit section of the exam. Amanda felt that having taken this course definitely gave her an advantage.

In addition to her accounting classes, Amanda also enjoyed a business course entitled “Motivation and Leadership” taught by Dr. Edward Inderrieden, a very inspiring professor, Amanda notes. The class allowed her to look at business from more of a management perspective – seeing the people rather than just the numbers. The examples provided by Dr. Inderrieden from real companies and his personal experiences with them, such as how to motivate people and demonstrate leadership within an organization, were decidedly helpful to Amanda. She continues to strive to incorporate those same qualities in her work.

When asked about advice for future CPA candidates at Marquette, Amanda believes committing the time and maintaining one’s focus are keys to being able to prepare fully:

“It’s a huge exam, so it takes time to study sufficiently. Don’t rush through the studying – give yourself enough time, but also give yourself a deadline so that you have a definite stopping point when you should be ready for the test.”

Additionally, she says that candidates should not put too much pressure on themselves. “My main goal was to pass, but passing with a high score was something additional to shoot for.” Amanda enjoyed spending her free time with family and friends to relax during weekends. She even took a short vacation with her family to visit some friends in Paso Robles, California. After the exams are over, in Amanda’s view, “Don’t worry about them anymore.”

In the fall of 2014, during her first week with PwC, Amanda found out that she had, indeed, won the EWSA. She was overwhelmed and overjoyed and her family and friends were ecstatic and proud of her. Due to her good attitude and unremitting efforts going into the exam prep and the exam itself, Amanda really earned and deserved her splendid success.

With her full-time job secure and graduation behind her, Amanda decided to take the CPA exams in the summer of 2014. Knowing that she did not have a great deal of time, she approached preparing for the exam in a structured way. In general, Amanda studied for each of the four exams between two to five weeks. She logged approximately eight to ten hours every weekday. She also made sure to get enough sleep and downtime, things that were really important for her to make it through her long days of studying.

During her exam preparation, Amanda received crucial support from her family and a close friend, Amy, who was also preparing for the exam. Amanda’s family was very confident she would win the EWSA, “even when I was doubting myself,” she says. When she learned she had won, she received her first “Congratulations!” in a text from her brother, Alex, a current student in the College of Business Administration. Another thing that helped very much to keep Amanda on track was working with Amy, as both women were using the same Becker study program. They were able to track their daily progress as well as ask each other pertinent questions and discuss various topics that would be covered on the exam.

When asked about advice for future CPA candidates at Marquette, she believes committing the time and maintaining one’s focus are keys to being able to prepare fully:

“Don’t rush through the studying – give yourself enough time, but also give yourself a deadline so that you have a definite stopping point when you should be ready for the test.”

Additionally, she says that candidates should not put too much pressure on themselves. “My main goal was to pass, but passing with a high score was something additional to shoot for.” Amanda enjoyed spending her free time with family and friends to relax during weekends. She even took a short vacation with her family to visit some friends in Paso Robles, California. After the exams are over, in Amanda’s view, “Don’t worry about them anymore.”

In the fall of 2014, during her first week with PwC, Amanda found out that she had, indeed, won the EWSA. She was overwhelmed and overjoyed and her family and friends were ecstatic and proud of her. Due to her good attitude and unremitting efforts going into the exam prep and the exam itself, Amanda really earned and deserved her splendid success.
Marquette’s Beta Alpha Psi chapter had another impressive year, achieving Superior Status for the 27th year in a row. We did it with the help of many people, including our new faculty advisor, Mrs. Barbara Kren. Mrs. Kren and I are both very grateful that our outgoing advisor, Mrs. Cindy Gruber, was always available to answer our questions. There were many things to learn, and Mrs. Kren dedicated countless hours to make sure that the transition went smoothly. This was evident in the time she spent discussing the coming week’s events with me before and after each meeting. With Mrs. Kren as the driving force behind our chapter, I am confident that our chapter will continue to succeed in the future. In addition, the executive board’s unseen tasks of recording hours, planning events and managing our finances all contributed to our success.

None of this would have been possible without our many committed members. I would also like to thank the faculty members who supported our chapter in the classroom and attended our events. These many contributions ensured that this year was a success for Beta Alpha Psi.

The year began at the Beta Alpha Psi National Conference in Atlanta, Georgia. A few members of our executive board represented the Marquette chapter. At the meetings, they learned some of the ways other chapters perform their roles, as well as best practices for other chapters’ activities and they came away with new ideas for professional and service events. Our executive board was also able to share some of our practices with the other chapters. We gave a presentation on how we run our auction fundraiser and our service events. In addition, we participated in the second year of the Beta Alpha Psi International Day of Literacy. We distributed books at local Atlanta elementary schools and spoke to the kids about the importance of literacy.

Twenty-seven years of superior status has helped us to build strong relationships with many firms in the greater Milwaukee area. Using these strong relationships, we put together a series of great professional and service events. Our members were able to network with members of these firms at our annual volleyball bash. Our members gave back to the community through the Briggs & Al’s Run and Walk for the Children’s Hospital of Wisconsin, the Aurora Food for Families Thanksgiving meal preparation with Deloitte, PB&J Day with KPMG by providing meals for local homeless and low income families, Bowl-A-Thon with EY for the Penfield Children’s Center, Project Linus by making and donating blankets with PwC, and the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program that provides tax return assistance to low income individuals. Additionally, our members also tutored freshman and sophomore Marquette students in financial and managerial accounting. We place a lot of emphasis on serving our community and fellow students and it is very satisfying to see that so many of our members were willing to volunteer their time.

Beta Alpha Psi is also a professional organization and we provide our members direct access to representatives from all types of local firms.

Our weekly meetings include networking opportunities as well as exposure to a broad range of career topics. These topics ranged from surviving the busy tax season to emotional intelligence. Other topics covered different career opportunities such as audit vs. tax, public vs. private, and life in a rotational program. We would like to thank all of our returning presenters: Johnson Controls, EY, Deloitte, Grant Thornton, PwC, Baird, KPMG, Baker Tilly, WICPA, Becker, the FBI, Actuant, PKWare, Wipfli, Cohen Fund Audit Services and Rockwell. We would also like to thank our new presenters this year: ORBA, Fiserv, Kohler Co., MillerCoors, CUNA Mutual and Associated Bank. All of these presenters shared a wealth of knowledge and insights that will be useful in our future careers. We appreciate the effort and support of these companies and we depend on their partnership for the success of our organization.

In addition to these activities, we welcomed new members in two initiation ceremonies. At our fall initiation, our speaker, Peter Bellin, International Controller at Rexnord Corporation, offered lessons he learned from his own life. He advised us to take advantage of new career opportunities even though they may seem uncertain or unfamiliar. Joe Rock, Managing Partner, KPMG Milwaukee, spoke at our spring initiation and gave us a glimpse into the varied career paths taken by his colleagues in his own Beta Alpha Psi graduating class. Thank you to both of our presenters. We always enjoy having alumni back on campus!

Marquette’s Beta Alpha Psi had another excellent year thanks to the time and effort of our advisor, executive board and our corporate presenters. I sincerely appreciate the participation of the faculty and all of our members. Thank you for helping to achieve our 27th consecutive year of Superior Status. I look forward to all of the great new things that our new executive board has in store for the chapter. I wish the chapter success in all that they do in the next academic year.

– James Ward

Joe Rock, Managing Partner of the KPMG Milwaukee office, was guest speaker at the Beta Alpha Psi spring awards banquet. Joe’s comments focused both on the accomplishments of his classmates during his senior year (see Senior Year yearbook photo below) as well as his ongoing relationships with many of them.
Rick Dillon, a Marquette University 1993 graduate, is the Beta Alpha Psi executive board’s choice for Beta Alpha Psi Outstanding Alumnus for this year. Rick was selected based on his career accomplishments and his service to the accounting profession and community.

Rick is currently the Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer at Century Aluminum Company, a primary aluminum producer, in Chicago, Illinois. Prior to joining Century, he served as the Vice President of Finance - Surface Mining Group at Joy Global, Inc., a worldwide leader in high-productivity mining solutions.

Rick and his wife Kimberly have two children, Ricky, Jr., (12) and Kelsey (10). The family enjoys swimming in the summer and skiing in the winter. Rick’s first priority continues to be his family and he is always working to achieve a healthy family/community/job balance.

Rick has returned to the Marquette campus to speak to student groups over the years and serves as an outstanding role model for the university’s minority students. He continues to exemplify in both his personal and professional lives the traditional ideals that Marquette most values. As such, it is an honor to have Rick as our Beta Alpha Psi Alumnus of the Year.
Please tell us a little about:

Your family…
I am happily married to Laura, my wife of 31 years. Laura is a reading intervention teacher in the Waukesha School District. We have three children – Jackie, Rob, and Cindy.

Influential people in your life…
The people who have had the greatest influence on my life and where I am as a person today are my parents, my wife, and my children. They have all been so supportive and have been essential in helping me prioritize my life, live my values and keep my feet firmly on the ground.

What might surprise some folks about you…
I did not attend Marquette… yet have been truly blessed to be an integral part of both the University and the College of Business. I served for 10 years as the PwC Relationship Partner connecting PwC and Marquette. As well as being a member of the Accounting Department Advisory Board, “I was also on the College of Business Dean’s Council of Excellence and have been a part of several search committees for the business school’s dean.”

A few sentences on:

What you especially like about your job…
I have enjoyed my career in public accounting and in the field of taxation primarily due to the challenge of the ever changing tax legislation and regulations, the opportunity to be creative in my role through tax planning, tax structuring and tax consulting, and the variety of experiences that my career has offered me.

What always stays new about your job…
I continue to enjoy being around people, listening to them and hearing what they have to offer. I learn something from everyone I encounter.

Special memory of Marquette…
I received a very humbling and overly generous recognition reward in 2012 for “Friend of the College of Business” at the Annual Marquette Awards Day… truly one of the highlights of my career and my life.

1–2 words to indicate your favorite:

Time of the year…
March Madness, of course! And the NCAA Basketball tournament.

Movie…
Entrapment, keeps you guessing and thinking throughout.

Spectator sport…
Anything Bears, Cubs, Bulls or Blackhawks related, with due respect to the Packers, Brewers and Bucks.
Thank you for conducting the interviews and preparing the articles.

Their names and where they will be in the Fall of 2015 (left to right):
Angela Robertson (PricewaterhouseCoopers in Milwaukee); Matt Noe (PricewaterhouseCoopers in Milwaukee);
Joseph Valenti (Deloitte in Milwaukee); Xin Zhang (Beijing, China); Yuqiong Ye (Beijing, China)

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN ACCOUNTING

For information on the MSA program at Marquette, contact Dr. James P. Trebby, Director of the MSA Program at james.trebby@marquette.edu or Dr. Jeanne Simmons, Associate Dean, Graduate School of Management at jeanne.simmons@marquette.edu.

Charles T. Horngren Research Seminar
The seminar, named in memory of Charles T. Horngren, Marquette University alum and professor at Stanford University, is a joint effort of the Accounting, Economics and Finance departments. Funding for this seminar was provided through the generosity of Dr. Horngren and his family. During the 2014-2015 academic year, the seminar included two external and one internal accounting presenters. Dr. Angela Gore, George Washington University, presented “Do Governments Hide Resources from Unions? The Influence of Public Sector Unions on Financial Reporting Choices,” and Dr. Adi Masli, University of Kansas, presented “Tone at the Top, Financial Reporting Quality, and Corporate Audits.” During their visits, both Dr. Gore and Dr. Masli visited with accounting faculty one-on-one to further discuss research initiatives. Additionally, Dr. Kevin Rich of Marquette’s Accounting department presented his paper “Municipal Financial Manager Turnover and Accounting Restatements.”

CPA Exam Results – 2014
During 2014 Marquette was ranked 26th of large schools (100 or more candidates) for the first-time pass rate. In 2014 the state of Wisconsin was ranked 2nd for the pass rate (all sections) for first-time test takers with a passing percentage of 58.8% as compared to the national average of 55.0%. Marquette had a 73.8% pass rate for 2014. Amanda Isken (see separate article on p. 9) received an Elijah Watt Sells award for her performance on the CPA exam.

Accounting Faculty receive PwC INQuiries Grant
Dr. Jodi Gissel, Dr. Qianhua Ling, Dr. Kevin Rich and Dr. Ikseon Suh shared a PwC INQuiries grant to develop material, often referred to as “big data” (i.e., data creation, data sharing, data analytics, and data mining), to further incorporate the use of technology into their respective courses.

Popular Research
“A Review of Bankruptcy Predictions Studies: 1930-Present,” by Dr. Jodi Gissel, Dr. Don Giacomino and Dr. Michael Akers published in the Journal of Business and Economics Research (Winter 2007) continues to be one of the ten most popular papers at Marquette University based on the average number of full-text downloads per day since the paper was posted.

New Faculty Members
Beginning with the Fall 2015 semester, the accounting department welcomes two new faculty members, Dr. Joe Wall and Mr. Doug Smith. Dr. Wall completed his Ph.D. at Case Western Reserve University in May 2015. His dissertation focused on fraud and was titled, “Disempowering the ‘Robin Hood’ Fraudster: Empathetic Pathways Weaken Regulators and Enable Fraudulent Behavior – A Framework for Redesigning Controls.” During his doctoral program, Joe taught a variety of accounting and finance classes and served as Chair of the Department of Business Administration at Carthage College. He also has industry experience that includes roles as chief financial and compliance officer at Ideas in Motion LLC, a New York Stock Exchange firm. Dr. Wall will teach a variety of financial accounting courses.

Mr. Doug Smith, currently Risk & Compliance Counsel for Marquette, will teach our business law courses. Doug has a J.D. and MBA from Marquette. Doug’s professional experience includes service in the US Army Judge Advocate General Corps and in-house positions at Johnson Controls, the Medical College of Wisconsin, and as Associate General Counsel at Marquette.

WICPA Educator Award
Dr. Michael Akers received the 2015 Wisconsin Institute of Certified Public Accountants Excellence Award-Educator at the WICPA Spring 2015 Member Recognition Banquet and Annual Business meeting.

Alums Complete PhD
Accounting alums Adam Bordeman (undergraduate, MSA), Ling Tuo (MSA) and Jill Weber (undergraduate, MSA) have completed their doctoral studies in 2015. Adam graduated from the University of Colorado Boulder and will start in August at California Polytechnic State University. Ling completed her PhD at the University of Memphis and will begin her academic career at Lawrence Technological University. Jill graduated from Oklahoma State University and will begin her academic career in August 2015 at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater. Congratulations to Dr. Bordeman, Dr. Tuo and Dr. Weber!

Federation Schools of Accountancy
Dr. Michael Akers was elected to serve as Secretary of the Federation Schools of Accountancy Board of Directors for 2015-2016.

Alum Wins Teaching Awards
Olivia Johnson, PhD candidate at the University of Iowa, received two teaching awards during the spring 2015 semester: 1) University Teaching Award for Teaching Assistants (competitive process based on input from students and faculty) and 2) Bryon R. Ross Award for Teaching Excellence (chosen by accounting faculty responsible for the introduction accounting courses).

MARQUETTE TEAMS PARTICIPATE IN ACCOUNTING FIRM COMPETITIONS

Deloitte Tax Case Competition

Deloitte & Touche held its 12th Annual Tax Case Study Competition during the Fall 2014 semester. Students from universities across the nation participated in the competition. Teams of up to four students were given five hours to analyze and develop a written response to a complex, hypothetical tax case. Marquette teams participated in both the undergraduate and graduate competitions.

Deloitte Audit Case Competition

Marquette University participated in Deloitte’s 8th Annual Central Region Audit Case Competition in Chicago. The competition included students from the following schools:

- College of St. Ben’s/St. John’s University
- DePaul University
- University of Iowa
- University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
- University of Nebraska-Lincoln
- University of Wisconsin-Madison

Each school was given four to six weeks to analyze a case. The process culminated with a presentation to a mock audit committee that consisted of Deloitte partners.

Zynamite Squad: Mathias Kopitski, Na Wang, Ziewi Huang, Yuli Pang, Mohsin Mirza

PwC xACT Competition

PricewaterhouseCoopers held its 12th Annual xACT campus competition during the Fall 2014 semester. Teams of five accounting students (including at least one junior, two sophomores and two other students, senior or graduate level) were given two weeks to research and prepare a response to a high-level accounting and auditing issue. Each team presented its solution to a panel of judges, consisting of PwC managers and partners. Based on the presentation and demonstration of critical thinking and teamwork, the judges chose one team from each campus to compete in the national competition. The teams listed below competed in the campus competition and the winner was “Zynamite Squad.” The team received $1000 for winning the competition.

for others is something Mark finds extremely important and applicable to both one’s personal and one’s business life.

At the present time, Mark is CEO and president of Tecta America Corporation, a leading commercial roofing contractor, in Rosemont, Illinois, and is primarily responsible for providing the direction of new acquisitions, leadership and organizational development programs, and financial management. Under his leadership, the company grew from 17 locations and $160 million in revenue to more than 45 locations and more than $550 million in revenue. This is actually his second stint with the company. He left Tecta America from 2012 through May 2014 to become the Managing Director of Chaifetz Group, LLC, a private investment firm. Before joining Tecta America Corp in 2001, Mark was President and CEO of Entrade, an e-commerce incubator. Prior to that, he was the President and CEO of Bagcraft Corporation, a leading manufacturer of flexible packaging products.

Mark has plenty of career-related advice for current Marquette students. Most importantly, he advises students to stay up-to-date on developments within their profession and to constantly be learning new things. He also recommends staying connected to the university, being a proud alum, and striving to be the best at whatever it is you do. Mark Santacrose is a real-life example of the fact that one does not simply attend Marquette for four years. Rather, one becomes a part of it for life and vice versa.

— Joseph Valenti

Cheryl believes playing sports is great preparation for success in life. As she tells her boys, “Training and practice is how you get better at things, whether that is in sports, in studying or when trying something new. You need to practice and to honor your commitments, too, because others are relying on you.” The lessons Cheryl learned from her different family and career roles, her training, running, and playing sports have shaped who she is today and given her a very fulfilling life.
