

"Living For the City"

Oral history project exploring the Black middleclass in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. We are attempting to dive into their lived experiences. Milwaukee is one of the most segregated cities in America.

The Black narrative of Milwaukee has been of poverty, incarceration, lead poisoning, evictions, and educational underachievement. What we do not hear about is the Black middleclass experiences. These oral histories will be analyzed in relation to sociological assumptions about the residential patterns of middleclass African Americans in major metropolitan areas of the United States.

Kam Rabon, UW-Milwaukee
Viki Gonzales, UW-Milwaukee

Continuing in Spring 2024, I will be interviewing those participants connected to the Marquette University community and will have a pivotal role in the project's traveling exhibit.

“Challenges the Black narrative of Milwaukee that has focused on social pathology by providing an alternative representation that has largely remained invisible in both scholarship and media

“Morris Fromkin Lecture”

Received the 2023 Fromkin Research Grant and we had our lecture in October and people can access it on the UWM library website.

Related Experience/Skills

Marquette Wire

I was a reporter for the non-profit organization on Marquette's campus where it was my tasks to produce content for print on a weekly basis. Having to conduct daily interviews and to transcribe it into a story incorporating effective listening abilities

Honors/Communications Mentor

Being hands on by impacting lives on a consistent basis is the core to these roles. Taking heed to what students are in need of by being an advocate for their great work and being a listener through their dark moments.
