MASTER LIST OF CATHOLIC GROUPS

new2003; rev2006-2017

These Catholic Church agencies and affiliated Catholic organizations have had past involvement in evangelization and ministry to Native Americans in the United States. Most, but not all maintain their records in one or more archival repositories. Within the A-Z Index, the Congregatio Pro Gentium Evangelizatione, the United States Catholic Conference, and dioceses and archdioceses are listed under "Catholic Church," whereas local churches and missions and affiliated organizations are listed independently.

The Catholic Church

Holy See

Three agencies of the Holy See include at least some documentation pertaining to Native Americans in the United States. They are the Archivio Vaticana or Archivum Secretum Vaticanum (Vatican Archives), which is in Vatican City, and the Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana (Vatican Library) and the Congregatio Pro Gentium Evangelizatione (Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples), both of which are in Rome. The Congregatio Pro Gentium Evangelizatione was formerly known as the Congregatio de Propaganda Fide or Propaganda Fide.

United States Catholic Conference

The Committee on Native American Catholics of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops monitors diocesan activities on Native American Catholics. The conference's website includes links to diocesan websites throughout the United States and includes the page Native American Catholics under its Department of Education.

Dioceses and Archdioceses

The following dioceses and archdioceses hold Catholic records about Native Americans in the United States and are so-noted in entries and the Master Index. The dioceses are identified by contemporary names, which are arranged geographically by state and there under by lineage. Within the entries, the history notes for each include the names of all Native Catholic missions, parishes, and schools within that diocese and its predecessors. Dioceses outside the Midwest and West that have administered portions of these regions are also noted.
