The Postcard Correspondence from Van Vechten to Priebe, 1946-1956

The postcard backs can be viewed and searched within the digital collection; however, for those wishing to read through the correspondence as a single body of text, here we have arranged the transcriptions in chronological order.

Only those backs that were clearly dated, either by Van Vechten or the postmark, have been included. At the bottom of each transcription is a unique Identifier (e.g., MUA_KJP_00263back) that corresponds to the image in the digital collection.

Dear Karlo,
Have those large pictures reached you yet? Mailed to Mason Sheet just when you were moving. I have known Lillian Gish since 1913 and see her & Dorothy frequently. Lillian's dog is named Malcolm. Lady Day is at the Strand. I've already done the pieces about Firbank. One is in Excavations the other the preface to Prancing Nigger.

Dear Karlo,
Saw The King & I for the third time yesterday with Celeste Holm instead of Gertrude Laurence & other changes of cast & last night went with the Schuylers & some nice Haitian boys to see Danilova Slavencka & Freddy Franklin in a pretty program at the Stadium. Today is just as hot. Will this miserable weather never cease?

The wedding which was very swell. 5 bridesmaids; 5 groomsmen. 1 maid of honor, passed off very well. The supper was excellent, good champagne flowed like water. Most of the guests were unknown to me because neither Leontyne or Bill have ever lived in Harlem. However I knew enough. Langston was there, Rawn Spearman, Cab Calloway and others!

That Bird Is Not So Odd
Gift to the Staten Island Zoo Is Catbird Lacking Usual Color
The feathered puzzle that was presented to the Staten Island Zoo on Sunday was identified yesterday as a common catbird - with a difference.

Clyde Gordon, director of the zoo in West Brighton, explained that instead of the usual dark gray, the bird's feathers were almost white because of a lack of pigment. "But it's not a true albino, because its eyes are not pink," he said.

The bird stared with black eyes from its cage in quarantine, where it will remain until its sex and state of health are determined. It has been silent since a man from New Jersey trapped it in a mulberry tree, which the bird liked to visit.

"It is accepting captivity gracefully," Mr. Gordon reported. "It has been eating well and probably will sing when it goes on [word illegible] early in August."

Newspaper clipping transcription:
Marginalia: One of the hundreds of migrating birds that ran into the Empire State Building on Wednesday night got wedged in a westwall ventilator in the thirty-fifth floor offices of Schenley Research Institute. Dr. Alfred Liebman, laboratory head, fed the bird, housed it under a glass bell and, when it seemed to have shaken off shock late Friday afternoon, turned it loose into twilight. It gained altitude immediately, vanished toward the south . . . Fall colors in the New York Botanical Gardens are already rich and lovely. . . Allen Porter of the Museum of Modern Art is trying to trace the bronze rooster that once ornamented the top of the Heckscher Building in Fifth Avenue. The museum got it [sic] start in Heckscher Building and Mr. Porter wants the rooster for the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration in November.

PTO is Robert Curtis. Dear Karlo,
The show in the Public Library which I saw for the first time yesterday turns out to be stupendous! It is a complete (more or less) history of my work with illustrations, letters (extraordinary- from[?] extraordinary people), & a few of my photographs at the end. Today is the formal opening but a few of my friends came yesterday.
