The Office of Research and Sponsored Programs and the Raynor Memorial Libraries are proud to present the Fifth Annual Research Institute for Faculty!

The purpose of the annual institute is to promote the research career development of Marquette faculty. The institute provides an opportunity for participants to engage in focused dialogue with colleagues and guest speakers on topics that impact research.

WHEN: Friday, September 26, 2008 TIME: 8:00 a.m. – 1:30 p.m.

WHERE: Beaumier Suite, Raynor Memorial Libraries

Faculty and their Graduate Research and Teaching Assistants are encouraged to attend the Institute.

Register by September 10, 2008. Simply send an email to jennie.schatzman@marquette.edu or call x8-7225. When you RSVP, please let us know if you'll be joining us for breakfast and/or lunch. If your graduate research/teaching assistant(s) will also be attending, let us know their names and whether they will be joining us for breakfast and/or lunch.

The topic for the Institute this year is scholarly communication, and the Office of Research and Sponsored Programs, together with the Raynor Memorial Libraries, is pleased to be able to co-host five nationally renowned speakers.

8:00 Continental Breakfast

8:25 Welcome: William Wiener, Vice Provost for Research and Dean of the Graduate School and Janice Simmons-Welburn, Dean of Libraries

8:30 – 9:15 The Evolving Landscape: Addressing Access Issues in Academic and Research Publishing Today

• Richard Fyffe is currently the administrative director of the Grinnell College library, holding the Samuel R. and Marie-Louise Rosenthal Librarian of the College position there. He received an MS from the Simmons College Graduate School of Library and Information Science in 1984 as well as a BA and MA in philosophy from the University of Connecticut—Storrs in 1979 and 1998, respectively. In his professional career, Mr. Fyffe has focused on issues relating to digital preservation, information access, and the topic of our conference: scholarly communication. He has published on these topics in several professional journals, including his most recent article, co-authored with William Welburn, which appears in the March 2008 issue of College and Research Libraries News: "ETDs, Scholarly Communication, and Campus Collaboration." He has co-authored several books, including two on digital preservation as a campus-wide issue in today's schools, has presented on digitization, scholarly communication, and publishing at numerous scholastic conferences and colloquia, and has participated in many task forces and committees dedicated to digital preservation and publishing policy. In addition to his pursuits in academic publishing, Mr. Fyffe is also an active member in numerous national professional organizations, foremost as the co-chair of the Scholarly Communications Committee for the Association of College and Research Libraries (2008-2010) and chair of the Center for Research Libraries' Liberal Arts Colleges Interest Group.

9:15 – 10:00 Open Access: the Revolution in Academic Publishing

• Henry Hagedorn currently holds an adjunct professorship at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, after retiring from his position as Head of the Entomology Department at the University of Arizona, Tucson, in 2005. He received a BS in Zoology from the University of Wisconsin, Madison (1965), as well as a MS in Entomology (1966), before receiving his PhD in Insect Physiology from the University of California-Davis in 1970 and completing his post-doctoral work in Developmental Biology at the University of Connecticut and Yale in 1972 and 1973, respectively. His work focuses on the endocrinology of insects, especially the mosquito, in the hopes that by better understanding the basic biology of this simple organism, important information may be gleaned and applied to the study of human and animal diseases. His work has earned him numerous professional honors, and he has served on several editorial boards and professional committees. During the course of his career, he has demonstrated his dedication to academic research and publication by 85 separate publications in academic journals, edited texts, and monographs, and in 2000, he founded the Journal of Insect Science, an open access journal. He currently serves as its editor and has worked at the forefront of issues relating to open access and academic publishing.

10:15 – 11:00 Challenges and Opportunities of Electronic Thesis and Dissertation Programs

• Cathleen L. May holds a Ph.D. in Biology from UC Berkley. She has served as Interim Associate Dean for Research and Senior Director for Strategic Initiatives for the University of Michigan. She was the former Chief Science Officer for the Geological Society of America. For the past three years, Dr. May served as the Director of Dissertation Publishing for ProQuest, helping guide both the company and the graduate education community across the rapidly changing landscape of scholarly publishing in the new era of digital technology. She continues to consult to graduate schools as well as to ProQuest on issues of scholarly publishing, meanwhile embarking on new projects in alternative energy development. Dr. May has devoted her career to building effective partnerships between academia and society, through leadership positions in government, Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), university administration, and in the publishing and information industry. She has led and served on more than 50 special committees in and across government, industry, foundations, and learned societies both domestically and internationally. With more than 20 peer-reviewed publications, dozens of published editorials and articles, and more than 3 dozen invited speaking engagements to her credit, Dr. May continues to be a thought-leader in a variety of public interest arenas.

11:00 – 11:50 Copyright & the Academy: Faculty as Consumers and Producers of Creative Content

• Tomas Lipinski received a JD (from Marquette University Law School, 1984), a Master of Laws (from the John Marshal Law School in Chicago, 1986), and most recently a PhD from the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (1998), in addition to having a MLIS from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's School of Library and Information Science (1990). He has taught law at Syracuse and UWM, and information studies at Urbana-Champaign and most recently UWM, where he held the position of Co-Director for the Center for Information Policy Research and is now an associate professor in the School of Information Studies. His research interests include Information and Law Policy, Information Ethics, Legal Problems Affecting Libraries, and more. His publications include two handbooks on issues concerning copyright—"The Complete Copyright Liability Handbook for Librarians and Educators" (Neal-Schuman, 2006), and "Copyright Law and the Distance Education Classroom" (Scarecrow, 2005)—as well as numerous articles on intellectual property and the law, the most recent of which, "The Impact of Copyright Law and Other Ownership Mechanisms on the Freedom of Inquiry: Infringements upon the Public Domain," can be found in the Journal of Information Ethics Spring 2006 issue.

12:00 Lunch

12:30 – 1:15 Life's a Bit: The New Landscape of Information Distribution and Your Research

• Thomas Bacher received a BA in History and German from Hiram College (1978), a MA in Political Science from Kent State University (1980), and an MBA from Purdue in 2003. Since his time as a production editor at Plenum Press (NY, NY) in 1981, he has been involved in the publishing business. He has been employed at several academic publishers, including Longman, Inc., Cambridge University Press, and most recently, Purdue University Press where he served as Director from 1997 until 2008. At Purdue he revitalized the press vision, organization, and acquisition strategies, including tripling book production and establishing several new imprints all within the existing budget. Upon leaving Purdue in 2008, Mr. Bacher was appointed director of the University of Akron Press, where he will continue to support academic inquiry through the publication of creative and scholastic works. In addition to his work at Akron, Mr. Bacher also serves as a member of the Association of American University Presses' Electronic Committee.

1:15 Closing: William Wiener, Vice Provost for Research and Dean of the Graduate School